Executive Summary

Conclusion:	Uncertain
Confidence Score:	97%
Summary:	The incident occurred at work during lifting a heavy 70-pound box, with twisting to avoid dropping it, resulting in lumbar strain and a right shoulder sprain. The event happened at a Granite Logistics LLC distribution site in Concord, NH, and the employee's duties align with a warehouse/forklift role. It occurred within the policy period and the employer promptly reported the injury, sought initial medical treatment, and the employee returned to light-duty work. Under Part One (Workers' Compensation Insurance), this injury appears to be a bodily injury by accident arising out of employment, with no evident policy exclusions applying. Therefore, the claim is plausibly covered under the policy. Potential denial risks, if any, would include a determination that the injury is non-work-related, not caused or aggravated by work duties, a pre-existing condition without aggravation, or issues with documentation or reporting, but none are indicated by the provided facts. Low overall OCR match confidence (0.97). Form fields (policy ID, first name, last name) show partial similarity to the policy record. Claim likely corresponds to the correct policyholder but cannot be verified with high certainty due to extraction inconsistencies.
